Resellers wanted for adjustable comb/cheekrest on composite gunstocks

A small Swedish company started in 2014 by hunters, has designed a new form of cheekrest / comb for rifles, which are now sold in Sweden and Norway within the hunting community. As hunters they have observed the problem that gunstocks are not individually adapted according to what kind of sight the shooter is using. Rifles for sporting and hunting produced today have gunstocks that are adapted for the open sights that are normally mounted at the factory. This often means that switching sight puts the gunstock at a less optimal height, leading to discomfort and/or poor shooting results. Retrofitting this product on the rifle allows for individually tailoring of the height, and thus allows the shooter too quickly get an ergonomically correct position when shooting with both open and fixed sights. With a simple grip, the height can be adjusted in according with the user's abilities and needs. The product is designed to be mounted on gunstocks made of composite materials. The company is looking for resellers in Austria, France, Germany Denmark, United Kingdom and Italy for distribution services agreement. The company will provide its partners with training and marketing materials.

Swedish company offering an innovative universal smart phone holder for cars is looking for European distributors

The phone holder has a plastic mount that slides onto the car's ventilation blades. Thereafter, the smart phone is attached to the strong suction cup, allowing it to sit in plain sight and be rotated for vertical or horizontal use. When the phone is mounted, the holder is not seen, creating an illusion of the phone hovering in front of the dashboard. Since the phone holder is attached to the ventilation blades, it does not obstruct the driver's view of the road ahead. The position also allows the driver to glance briefly at the smart phone to get information, avoiding distraction. The suction cup is adapted to create a strong mounting to the backside of a smart phone. The mount is designed so that it does not scratch or damage the car's ventilation blades. The phone holder is made in the European Union and made from materials allowing it to be burned with household waste at the end of its service life. It gives the phone holder a very low environmental impact. The phone holder comes supplied in colour-coordinated packaging (custom colour is possible) that can be stacked or hung with the included euro slot. The packaging also protects the phone holder during storage. The Swedish company is now looking for European distributors with established sales channels and contacts, preferably with retailers within areas such as telecommunications and accessories, automotive and accessories or fuel delivery.

Triage and decision support system for prehospital and hospital emergency care - distributor or reseller sought

A Swedish company has developed a support system for prehospital and hospital emergency care. It consists of a protocol with both a method for triage and a method for the continuing emergency process. The protocol is available in both paper format and computer format that can be used at any device. It is used from the arrival of the patient at the emergency clinic or upon arrival of the ambulance. The medical team conducts a physical medical examination and a standardised and structured anamnesis of the symptoms and the current disease. They obtain by using the system an objective picture of the patient's condition. The system provides a recommendation on the level of priority based on medical risk and need. There is either a recommendation for delivering immediate emergency healthcare or allowing the patient to wait without medical risk. It also recommends how the emergency healthcare should be continued with further tests and/or surveillance. The triage and decision support system has been validated and used at major hospitals' emergency clinics and by ambulances for ten years. All counties in Sweden and many in Norway have bought the system and over ten million patients have been examined with it. The company updates the system yearly together with users. The Swedish company is looking for distributors and resellers in Europe. Such partners can be companies that provide health care products and services, big data software companies, companies and other organisations that own and run emergency clinics, ambulance services and primary healthcare centers. The Swedish company wants to establish a long-term business relationship. The partner is expected to teach about the system in their local language. They will handle support and evaluation. The partner is further expected to turn one or two hospitals /emergency departments into reference units for the market. They should sell and market the system throughout their country.

Technologies to enhance wood quality and sustainable product performance

The slow-growing forests of Sweden's northern and Arctic regions produce pine and fir wood that has a higher density and higher content of natural tar and resins than timbers sourced from forests in more temperate or warmer climates. These natural conditions conspire to produce a type of timber that is much more durable and able to withstand the elements, such as intense sunlight, high levels of humidity, rain water, snow, and significant periodic variations in outdoor temperature. The product range includes the following:

- round windows with square cassette mountings, which are easily fitted in standard wall frames;
- laminated wooden posts, where it is always the more durable core wood that is exposed to the elements.
- hand rails and other components for in- and outdoor wooden stairs;
- components for use in wooden verandahs, balustrades, pergolas, patio floors and gazebos;
- fence components;
- louvre window shutters;
- durable high-end luxury pine, fir, oak and ash flooring;
- indoor and outdoor wooden pine and fir paneling
- Heat-treated wood suitable for out-door flooring, fences and in-door paneling.

The cooperation could be a joint venture or a technical agreement.

A Swedish developer and manufacturer of high quality slowfeeding solutions for horses are searching for distributors on the horse supply market

SlowFeeding means bringing together horses essential need for continuous grazing/eating with the need to stop them from eating too much and with the efficiency demands of modern horse keeping by the use of simple and cost effective technical solutions. The health effects on the horses created by these solutions are profound and two independent studies performed at the Swedish University of Agriculture (SLU) founded by the Swedish government are currently being performed to put numbers on the effects created by this company's products and solutions. The experiences from the Swedish market clearly show that these are main stream products creating just as much interest from all niches and disciplines of the Equine market. There are low price low quality copies on the market but very few (if any) other products offer the same value for money. More of a problem is that beginners might confuse early SlowFeeding products with old fashion hay nets. This is however not possible with these new products. The company is only interested in co-operation with well-established companies with high business ethics and large networks on the market of sales of equine supply. Markets of special interest are Italy and France.
